BRADSTREETS' REPORT.

RESTRICTED VOLUME OF BUSINESS THROUGHOUT.

Holiday Specialties in Demand—Money not Materially Easier—Bullish Operations Suspended in New York—Bank of England's Drop in Discount.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The somewhat restricted volume of business throughout the country reported to Bradstreets a week ago continues a feature of the commercial and industrial situation, notwithstanding the colder weather which within the past few days has tended to stimulate buying. Holiday specials are good at retail. St. Paul, Cincinnati and Memphis report a very good trade in seasonable, but at most other prominent distributing centres, like announcements are qualified by the admissions of the falling off in the volume of trade, less satisfactory interior mercantile collection, and a disposition to take no unnecessary risks on the part of bankers and traders. Money is not materially easier at international centers, and the banks are still ignoring speculative requests for funds in their efforts to meet the demands of producing and distributing interests. Bullish operations in the New York stock market have been suspended on account of the delay in perfecting the Western Railway agreement, and the unsettled condition of the money market in Europe. Buying has been fairly large but speculation has been in the hands of traders and prices have tended downward of a very dull market. Money was held very stiffly at New York until the Bank of England dropped its discount rate from 6 to 5 per cent. This had a good effect and calls which had ranged from 14 to six per cent. earlier in the week got down as low as 4 per cent. on bankers' balances. Commercial paper is still taken at 6 to 8 per cent. discount for best with little wanted by bankers except from regular customers. The general tendency of prices of staples has been downward. Iron is no lower but weaker; large orders are being placed. The effort to advance coal prices has failed. Prices for lake copper are expected to go off ½ cents in the near future. The large stocks and slack demand have shaded print cloths and wool is dull as previously with a reduced volume of sales. Cattle and hogs off 5 cents at the west and provisions are a little lower on the week. November bank clearings gained more heavily over those of November last year than did those of October over October 1889 owing to the active trade and larger stock speculation. The total November clearings at 52 cities aggregate $5,441,712,586 an increase of 07.3 per cent. over last year. Wheat stocks available in the United States and Canada east of the Rockies. December 9,612,000 bushels smaller than one year ago. The aggregate of domestic stocks both coasts (Canada included) at European storage points and afloat for Europe on December 1st, is also nearly ten million bushels less than December 1889. Total exports both coasts equal 2,488,183 bushels against 19,116,823 bushels last week at 2,323,252 bushels in the last week last year. Total reports July 1 to date equal 43,963,875 bushels against 44,821,855 bushels in 1889. Business failures reported to Bradstreets number 321 in the United States in this week against 233 last, and 210 this week last year. Canada 27 this week against 36 last. Total number of failures in the United States, January 1 to date is 9,501 against 10,653 in a like portion of 89.

Victim of Malpractice.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6—A woman giving the name of Belle Scarlan but who was also known as Mrs. Belle Owens of Portland, Oregon, was found dead in her room at 309 Hyde street this morning. She is supposed to be a victim of malpractice.

Sale of the World.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—The New York World is said to have been sold by Jos. Pulitzer and his fellow owners to Geo. W. Childs and A. W. Drexel, the Philadelphia banker. The price is understood to be in the neighborhood of $3,500,000. The property is to be transferred on January 1. The sale includes the new fourteen-story building, the presses, engines, machinery, etc., the Evening World plant and the good will of both papers. This shows what good property newspapers are. Everybody should start one.

Blaine Not a Candidate.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Ex-Congressman Amos Townsend, of Ohio, who is at the Fifth Avenue hotel, does not think Mr. Blaine is in the presidential race. He said in conversation to-day: "I wish to prick the Blaine bubble right here. Blaine is a friend of mine, and I admire him very much. He is not a candidate for the presidency. He told me so himself. I had a long conversation with him one day, and he said that he had been a candidate several times and failed of nomination. When he did get it he was defeated, and he thought that was enough.

"His ambition, he added, was to fulfill the duties of secretary of state in a way that would reflect credit upon the country and himself. He was tired of the political excitement involved in a presidential race. I believe Mr. Blaine, and while he is popular and his reciprocity ideas have been hailed with expressions of approval everywhere, I do not think the siren voice of political ambition will change him from his resolution not to become a candidate."

Captain Hill Drowned.

PORT TOWNSEND, Dec. 5.—Captain George D. Hill walked off the gang plank at Fairhaven at 7 o'clock this evening while boarding the Eastern Oregon. First Mate Leighton jumped overboard after Mr. Hill, but only succeeded in recovering his lifeless body. The body goes to Seattle on the Eastern Oregon. George D. Hill was a great man when Seattle was a village, and he was still great when the village grew to be a city. The news of his tragic death will be a sad blow to his many friends of long standing, not only in Seattle, but all over the state and in the east.

Des Moines Forger Gets Two Years.

TACOMA, Dec. 5.—In the superior court to-day O. J. McCausland was sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the Walla Walla penitentiary for forging young Moore's name to a quit claim deed to the townsite of Des Moines. McCausland, it will be remembered, agreed to secure a quit claim deed from Moore, but on reaching California, and not finding him, he forged the young man's name to the deed. Young Moore is said to be dead, and the owner of the property is reported to be an inmate of the Stockacoom asylum and has no relatives.

International Copyright.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—Undoubtedly the president will sign the international copyright bill with the House amendments. Then justice will be done. New York publishers, however, agree that there will be no sudden change in the situation of literary affairs. "There will be no revolution in the publishing business," said Charles Scribner to-day. "The immediate effect of the law, assuming that the bill becomes a law, will be holding back new works till such a time as a copyright may be had in both countries, Great Britain and the United States. I have personal knowledge of a number of important books that are being withheld. If Stanley had not been an American citizen I feel that his book would not have appeared last summer. Being an American, of course he could get a copyright in this country. An English author would be debarred from that. I do not expect to see any great or noticeable change in the price of books. The day of 10 and 15-cent literature is practically over, anyway—over because publishers found that it did not pay them to turn out books at such a price. I think we shall still have the 25-cent and the 50-cent novels, as at present.

Mount Hood on a Burst.

PORTLAND, Dec. 4.—Manager Sturgis, of the India Packing Company, residing on Portland heights, states that from his residence last night he witnessed spasmodic eruptions of Oregon's great Mount Hood. The eruptions lighted the entire firmament for miles around. He states that he was perfectly dazzled by the sight and watched the occasional lurid outpourings of the mountain's wrath with the intensest interest, anticipating an eruption such as has made those of Vesuvius historic. While the lower portion of the city was enveloped in a chilly, penetrating fog, the morning sun shone brightly on the heights, and Mr. Sturgis added that before he left home for his office he saw the mountain encircled with a dense black ring of smoke.

LARKING COLLEGIATES.

Old Oxford Students Paint the Town Red—Hazing a Pupil.

OXFORD, Dec. 5.—Queen's college was lately the scene of a serious outbreak among the undergraduates. A party of fifteen or sixteen young men set out in masquerading costumes, their leader being dressed as a bishop with all the peculiarities attached to the office. Among others, there was one nun, two acolytes with censers and incense, while the balance wore surplices. All bore a sanctimonious, mock-decorous look and semblance. They marched in procession and carried cups containing large roses, whiskey and water. A number of biscuits concluded the dietary portion of the escapade.

The masqueraders went the rounds of the college, battering open doors and forcing their way into the bedrooms of the freshmen. When they had dragged out a sufficient number of victims they gathered them together, shivering in their scant night dresses, and then the masqueraders proceeded to celebrate high mass, and caused their victims to go through the ceremony to its smallest detail, urging them thereto with cutting blows from switches or sticks. The victims were forced to drink a quantity of the whiskey and gorge themselves with biscuits. Many were compelled by fear of further blows to eat and drink far beyond their comfortable capacity.

The party then broke up, but five of the participants then went to the room of a fellow student, who had not as yet been disturbed, and dragging him out of bed and stripping his night shirt from him tore it into shreds, and then carried him to the court, where they tied him to a tree and left him until morning.

The outraged men, acting on the advice of some more substantial college men, applied to the college authorities to redress their injuries, and gave the names of the aggressors. The faculty, after hearing the case, decided that the charge of blasphemy was not proven, but forcing their way into the room was pronounced to be a brutal outrage, and punishments were dealt out accordingly. The punishment was the sending of two men down for good. Two more were rusticated, and the others were gated one or two terms. The majority in the college, however, declare against the informers, and still more against those who compelled them to lay the information before the faculty.

THE DETHRONED KING.

THE MAJORITY PRESENT THEIR ULTIMATUM AND RETIRE.

Parnell Refuses to Resign—Forty-Four Irish Nationalists Retire from the Meeting and Appoint Justin McCarthy Chairman—Two Distinct Irish Parties.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Immediately after Parnell had taken the chair, and the journal of yesterday's session had been read Mr. Redmond, chairman of the special committee appointed to wait upon Gladstone yesterday, stated that the committee had discharged the duty which had been entrusted to them. As part of his report Redmond sent to the secretary to be read a letter which had late last night been received by the committee from Gladstone. The reading of the letter was quietly listened to until the portion of it was reached in which Gladstone offers to treat with the new leader of the Irish Nationalist party on the same terms of equality and mutual confidence he had once accorded to Mr. Parnell. When this point was reached by the secretary the supporters of Sexton and Healy cheered and cheered again. Their noisy demonstrations were promptly met by the ironical cries and satirical jeering of the Parnellite factions. At the conclusion of the reading of the Gladstone letter a stormy debate ensued in the midst of a scene of such excitement as has never been equalled even in the proceedings of this harassed meeting of angry Irishmen. Barry, Sexton and Healy in quick succession took the floor and with grim determination and powerful language demanded that a division be at once had upon the main question, that of the retirement of Parnell from the leadership of the Irish parliamentary party. Finally, in the midst of solemn silence, Mr. Sexton arose and speaking with calm deliberation in a tone indicative of suppressed emotion, delivered to Parnell the ultimatum of the majority of the Irish representatives in Parliament. The ultimatum was to the effect that in the event of an affirmatiee decision of Parnell as to his resignation of the chairmanship being delayed after 6 this p.m., the majority would withdraw from the present conference and proceed to convene a separate meeting of the majority. This meeting, said Sexton, slowly and deliberately facing his colleagues, will depose Charles Stewart Parnell from his place as leader of the national party of Ireland. With the conclusion of the remarks of Parnell's irreconcilable foe, and amidst a turmoil of excitement and confusion, at 2.45 the meeting took a recess.

At the expiration of the half hour recess, the conference re convened. A motion was at once made that Parnell vacate the chair. This Mr. Parnell refused to put before the meeting. Thereupon Justin McCarthy and 44 other members withdrew.

On the reassembling of the conference, at the conclusion of the half hour recess, a letter from Archbishop Walsh was read, which in the strongest terms demanded the peremptory removal of Parnell from the Irish leadership. A profound impression was created upon the conference by the reading of this document, which plainly indicated its adoption by the archbishop's colleagues of the Irish Catholic hierarchy of a policy aggressively hostile to Parnell's continuing in power.

John O'Connor then moved the passage of a resolution which declared Gladstone's letter in reply to the overture of the special committee of the conference, to be unsatisfactory, and asserting that Ireland requires positive and unequivocal assurances from the Liberal leader on behalf of his party regarding the vital questions of Irish control of the constabulary and the land problems.

The motion was seconded by Kenny in a brief but energetic speech. Abraham then took the floor and moved as amendment to O'Connor's motion, a resolution that Parnell should at once vacate the chairmanship of the Irish Nationalist party. Parnell stolidly refused to put the question on Abraham's resolution, thereupon Justin McCarthy and 44 other members of the conference rose from the seats and slowly filed out of the room.

Latest.—The majority of the Irish Nationalist members of the house of commons now in session in the room recently occupied by the Irish conference, have unanimously chosen Justin McCarthy as chairman.

Its Influence Spreading.

OTTAWA, Dec. 6.—The Indian department have stated that rumors circulated as to the Cree tribe having taken part in the ghost dances through the inducements of the Sioux Indians on the other side of the border are somewhat exaggerated. These rumors were occasioned through Chief Pie-a-Pot sending out presents of tobacco to Wood Crees on the northern reserves accompanied by invitations to pay him a visit. While the chief denies that it was with the object of joining in the Messiah craze he sent these, still the information received by the government has been such as to warrant fresh orders to be given to the mounted police to maintain strict watch and suppress with firm hands any attempt to join the craze.

Toronto News.

TORONTO, Dec. 6.—The interest taken by British investors in the Sudbury nickle mines is surprising. Advice was received yesterday that four London capitalists had left fully prepared to make heavy purchases in mining properties. A prominent speculator received a request yesterday from an American representative of a syndicate to place a price on some properties in the straight lake district. Stobe & McConnell, who bonded their claims to an English syndicate three months ago, have sold out. The price is unknown, but it is believed to be in the neighborhood of $200,000.

The Globe's Ottawa special says that there is a report current to-night that the Messiah craze has spread to the Indians of the Canadian Northwest and both the Cree and Sioux Indians are excited. The news is said to have been brought by Indian runners in the Northwest. It has created some uneasiness, as, from the first, the fear was entertained that the excitement was contagious. Latest information from the Northwest confirms the previous assurance of Indian agents that the Crees are all quiet on their reserves.

The Mail says: The fight over the Manitoba school law finds a remarkable parallel in the struggle which took place thirteen years ago regarding a somewhat similar statute passed in Prince Edward Island, Hon. Mr. Laflamme, Minister of Justice, construed the act as follows: The provisions in the Constitution Act which secures to any province a system of separate or dissentent schools requires as a condition the influence of federal authority to maintain that privilege; and these should be separate or dissentent in their nature by virtue of the law existing at the date upon which the province entered the union. The law was therefore allowed to go into operation and under this decision, the Manitoba school law is constitutional.

Fiendish Jealousy.

COBOURG, Dec. 5.—Andrew McGuir attempted to murder a man named Turner and a young lady named Tucker this evening at the station here by pushing them off the station platform as the space between two cars of a moving train arrived opposite them. Fortunately they fell between the platform and the cars, and not between, and escaped with bruises. McGuir is a rejected suitor for Miss Tucker's hand, and has served a term in penitentiary for shooting at and wounding her father when he ordered him to keep away from the house. McGuir escaped.

Missionaries Cause War.

NAGASAKI, Japan, Dec. 5.—When the United States steamer Alliance arrived at Conapi recently it was found that war had broken out between the natives and the Spanish. American missionaries were accused of causing the war. The Alliance was forced to remove them to the island of Oulad.

A Jack-the-Ripper Yarn.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—A special from San Francisco was published this morning that while Harry Dam, a New York and San Francisco journalist, was at work on the London Star he concocted the Jack the Ripper letters which created such a sensation in London in connection with the Whitechapel murders. In reply to an inquiry as to the truth, T. P. O'Conner, M.P., editor of the Star at the time, says he never heard of the story before and does not believe a word of it.

METROPOLITAN ITEMS.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The Australian colonies are much aroused over the question of the possession of the New Hebrides, of which France and Australia are both endeavoring to get control. At present the Australians have the advantage as they own the largest portion of lands brought within the white settlement. The natives do not evince any preference, occasionally eating a Frenchman and then an Australian.

The Spanish government is accused of harassing Protestant missionaries in the Caroline Islands with a view of driving them from that region and destroying their influence with the natives.

The police guard over the jail at Bolton, where McDonald the murderer of Miss Holts is confined, has been strengthened owing to fears of attempted violence. Since McDonald confessed that he waylaid and murdered the teacher, public indignation has been aroused to a high pitch. Miss Holts was head mistress at the Belmont school, and while on her way to her duties was waylaid and killed by McDonald and her body hidden under a cave in a ravine. She was not missed for five days when a search brought the crime to light. McDonald was an ex-convict on ticket of leave.

A SAIL ON THE LAKE.

REV. DR. TALMAGE PREACHES ABOUT GALILEE.

Full Report of the Brooklyn Divine's Latest Sermon in the Series Descriptive of His Trip Through the Land Where Jesus Lived and Died.

BROOKLYN, Nov. 30.—Rev. Dr. Talmage preached today the tenth of his series of sermons on his Palestine tour, describing his experiences on the lake whose waters were once stilled at the command of Christ. The sermon, which was delivered in the Brooklyn Academy of Music in the morning and as usual repeated before an enormous audience at the Christian Herald service in New York in the evening, was from the text: "He entered into a ship, and sat in the sea; and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land"—Mark iv, 1.

It is Monday morning in our Palestine experiences, and the sky is a blue Galilee above, as in the boat we sail the blue Galilee beneath. It is thirteen miles long and six miles wide, but the atmosphere is so clear it seems as if I could cast a stone from beach to beach. The lake looks as though it had been let down on silver pulleys from the heavens and were a section of the sea of glass that St. John describes as a part of the celestial landscape. Lake Galilee is a depression of six hundred feet in which the river Jordan widens and tarries a little, for the river Jordan comes in at its north side and departs from its south side; so this lake has its cradle and its grave.

Its white satin cradle is among the snows of Mount Hermon where the Jordan starts, and its sepulcher is the Dead sea into which the Jordan empties. Lake Como of Italy, Lake Geneva of Switzerland, Lake Lomond of Scotland, Lake Winnipesaukee of America are larger, but Lake Galilee is the greatest diamond that ever dropped from the finger of the clouds, and whether encamped on its banks as we were yesterday and worshiping at its crystal altars or wading into its waves, which make an ordinary bath solemn as a baptism, or now putting out upon its sparkling surface in a boat, it is something to talk about and pray about and sing about until the lips with which we now describe it can neither talk nor pray nor sing.

THE LAKE HAS MANY NAMES.

As sometimes a beautiful child in a neighborhood has a half dozen pet names, and some of the neighbors call her by one name and others by another, so this pet lake of the planet has a profusion of names. Ask the Arab as he goes by what this sheet of water is, and he will call it Tabariyeh. Ask Moses of the Old Testament, and he calls it Sea of Chinnereth. Ask Matthew, and he calls it Sea of Galilee. Ask Luke, and he calls it Sea of Gennesaret. Ask John, and he calls it Sea of Tiberias. Ask Josephus and Eusebius, and they have other names ready. But to me it appears a child of the sky, a star of the hills, a rhapsody of the mountains, the baptismal bowl of the world's temple, the smile of the great God. Many kinds of fish are found in these waters, every kind of tree upon its bank, from those that grow in the torrid zone to those in the frigid, from the palm to the cedar.

Of the two hundred and thirty war ships Josephus maneuvred on these waters—for Josephus was a warrior as well as a historian—there remains not one piece of a hulk, or one patch of a canvas, or one splinter of an oar. But return to America we never will until we have had a sail upon this inland sea. Not from a wharf, but from a beach covered with black and white pebbles, we go on board a boat of about ten or twelve tons, to be propelled partly by sail and partly by oar. The mast leans so far forward that it seems about to fall, but we find it was purposely so built, and the rope through a pulley manages to hoist and let down the sail. It is a rough boat, and as far as possible removed from a Venetian gondola or a sporteman's yacht. With a common saw and hammer and ax many of you could make a better one. Four barefooted Arabs, instead of sitting down to their oars, stand, as they always do in rowing, and pull away from shore. I insist on helping, for there is nothing more exhilarating to me than rowing, but I soon have enough of the clumsy oars and the awkward attempt at wielding them while in standing posture.

We put our overcoats and shawls on a small deck in the stern of the boat, the very kind of a deck where Christ lay on a fisherman's coat when of old a tempest pounced upon the fishing smack of the affrighted disciples. Ospreys and wild ducks and kingfishers fly overhead or dip their wings into the lake, mistaking it for a fragment of fallen sky. Can it be that those Bible stories about sudden storms on this lake are true? Is it possible that a sea of such seeming placidity of temper could ever rise and rage at the heavens? It does not seem as if this happy family of elements could have ever had a falling out, and the water strike at the clouds and the clouds strike at the water.

PULL AWAY, OARSMEN.

Pull away, oarsmen! On our right bank are the hot sulphur baths, so hot they are scalding, and the waters must cool off a long while before hand or foot can endure their temperature. Volcanoes have been boiling these waters for centuries. Four springs roll their resources into two great swimming reservoirs. King Herod here tried to bathe off the results of his excesses, and Pliny and Josephus describe the spurtings out of these volcanic heats, and Joshua and Moses knew about them, and this moment long lines of pilgrims from all parts of the earth are waiting for their turn to step into the steaming restoratives.

Let the boat, as far as possible and not run aground, hug the western shore of the lake that we may see the city of Tiberias, once a great capital, of the architecture of which a few mosaics and fallen pillars and pedestals, and here and there a broken and shattered frieze remain, mightily suggestive of the time when Herod Antipas had a palace here and reigned with an opulence and pomp and cruelty and abomination that paralyzes the fingers of the historian when he comes to write it, and the fingers of the painter when he attempts to transfer it to canvas. I suppose he was one of the worst men that ever lived. And what a contrast of character comes at every moment to the thoughtful traveler in Palestine, whether he walks the beach of this lake or sails as we now do these waters!

SIDE BY SIDE.

Side by side are the two great characters of this lake region, Jesus and Herod Antipas. And did any age produce any such antipodes, any such antitheses, any such opposites? Kindness and cruelty, holiness and filth, generosity and meanness, self sacrifice and selfishness, the supernal and the infernal, midnoon and midnight. The father of this Herod Antipas was a genius at assassination. He could manufacture more reasons for putting people out of this life than any man in all history. He sends for Hyrcanus to come from Babylon to Jerusalem to be made high priest, and slays him. He has his brother-in-law while in bathing with him drowned by the king's attendants. He slays his wife and his wife's mother and two of his sons and his uncle, and filled a volume of atrocities, the last chapter of which was the massacre of all the babes at Bethlehem.

With such a father as Herod the Great you are not surprised that this Herod Antipas, whose palace stood on the banks of this lake we now sail, was a combination of wolf, reptile and hyena; while the Christ who walked yonder banks and sailed these waters was so good that almost every rood of this scenery is associated with some wise word or some kindly deed, and all literature and all art and all earth and all heaven are put to the utmost effort in trying to express how grand and glorious and lovely he was and is and is to be. The Christly and Herodic characters as different as the two lakes we visit, and not far apart Galilee and the Dead sea; the one flower banked and the other bituminous and blasted; the one hovered over by the mercy of Christ, the other blasted by the wrath of God; the one full of finny tribes sporting in the clear depths, the other forever lifeless; the waters of the one sweet and pleasant to the taste, the other bitter and sharp and disgusting. Awful Dead sea! Glorious Gennesaret.

We will not attempt to cross to the eastern side of this lake, as I had thought to do, for those regions are inhabited by a thieving and murderous race, and one must go thoroughly armed, and as I never shot any one and have no ambition to be shot, I said: "Let us stay by the western shore." But we look over to the hills of Gadara, on the other side, down which two thousand swine after being possessed by the devil ran into the lake, and bringing down on Christ for permitting it the wrath of all the stock raisers of that country because of this ruining of the pork business. You see that Satan is a spirit of bad taste. Why did he not say: "Let me go into those birds, whole flocks of which fly over Galilee?" No; that would have been too high. "Why not let me go into the sheep which wander over these hills?" No; that would have been too gentle. "Rather let me go into these swine. I want to be with the denizens of the mire. I want to associate with the inhabitants of the filth. Great is mud! I prefer bristles to wings. I would rather root than fly. I like snout better than wing."

THE SCOFFING OF INFIDELITY.

Infidelity scoffs at the idea that those swine should have run into the lake. But it was quite natural that under the heat and burning of that demoniac possession they would start for the water to get cooled off. Would that all the swine thus possessed had plunged to the same drowning, for this day the descendants of some of those porcine creatures retain the demons, and as the devils were cast out of man into them, they now afflict the human race with the devils of scrofula, that comes from eating the unclean meat! The healthiest people on earth are the Israelites, because they follow the bill of fare which God in the book of Leviticus gave to the human race, and our splendid French Dr. Pasteur and our glorious German Dr. Koch may go on with their good work of killing parasites in the human system; but until the world corrects its diet, and goes back to the divine regulation at the beginning, the human race will continue to be possessed of the devils of microbe and parasite. But I did not mean to cross over to the eastern side of Lake Galilee even in discussion.

Pull away, ye Arab oarsmen! And we come along the shore near by which stand great precipices of brown and red and gray limestone crowned by basalt, in the sides of which are vast caverns, sometimes the hiding place of bandits, and sometimes the home of honest shepherds, and sometimes the dwelling place of pigeons and vultures and eagles. During one of Herod's wars his enemies hid in these mountain caverns and the sides were too steep for Herod's army to descend, and the attempt to climb in the face of armed men would have called down extermination. So Herod had great cages of wood, iron bound, made and filled them with soldiers and let them down from the top of the precipices until they gave signal that they were level with the caverns, and then from these cages they stepped out to the mouth of the caverns, and having set enough grass and wood on fire to fill the caverns with smoke and strangulation, the hidden people would come forth to die; and if not coming forth voluntarily Herod's men would pull them out with long iron hooks, and Josephus says that one father, rather than submit to the attacking army, flung his wife and seven children down the precipice and then leaped after them to his own death.

WE WANT TO PREACH CAPERNAUM.

Now, ye Arab oarsmen, row on with swifter stroke, for we want before noon to land at Capernaum, the three years' home of Jesus. But before arrival there we are to have a new experience. The lake that had been a smooth surface begins to break up into roughness. The air, which all the morning made our sail almost useless, suddenly takes hold of our boat with a grip astonishing, and our poor craft begins to roll and pitch and tumble, and in five minutes we pass from a calm to violence. The contour of this lake among the hills is an invitation to hurricanes. I used to wonder why it was that on so limited a sheet of water a bestormed boat in Christ's time did not put back to shore when a hurricane was coming. I wonder no more.

On that lake an atmospheric fury gives no warning, and the change we saw in five minutes made me feel that the boat in which Christ sailed may have been skillfully managed when the tempest struck it and the wild, importunate cry went up, "Lord save us or we perish!" I had all along that morning been reading from the New Testament the story of occurrences on and around that lake. But our Bible was closed now, and it was as much as we could do to hold fast, and wish for the land. If the winds and the waves had continued to increase in violence the following fifteen minutes in the same ratio as in the first five, and we had been still at their mercy, our bones would have been bleaching in the bottom of Lake Gennesaret instead of our being here to tell the story.

But the same power that rescued the fishermen of old today safely landed our party. What a Christ for rough weather! All the sailor boys ought to fly to him as did those Galilean mariners. All you in the forecastle, and all you who run up and down the slippery ratlines take to sea with you him who with a quiet word sent the winds back through the mountain gorges. Some of you Jack Tars to whom these words will come need to "tack ship" and change your course if you are going to get across this sea of life safely and gain the heavenly harbor. Belay there! Ready about! Helm's a-lee! Mainsail haul!

> Star of peace! beam o'er the billow
> Bless the soul that sighs for thee;
> Bless the sailor's lonely pillow,
> Far, far at sea.

Here at Capernaum, the Arabs having in their arms carried us ashore to the only place where our Lord ever had a pastorate, and we stepped amid the ruins of the church where he preached again and again and again—the synagogue whose rich sculpturing lay there, not as when others see it in springtime covered with weeds and loathsome with reptiles, but in that December weather completely uncovered to our agitated and intense gaze. On one stone of that synagogue is the sculpturing of a pot of manna, an artistic commemoration of the time when the Israelites were fed by manna in the wilderness, and to which sculpturing no doubt Christ pointed upward while he was preaching that sermon on this very spot in which he said, "Not as your fathers did eat manna and are dead; he that eateth of this bread shall live forever." Wonderful Capernaum! Scene of more miracles than any place in all the earth! Blind eyes kindling with the morning. Withered arms made to pulsate. Lepers blooming into health. The dead girl reanimated.

These Arab tents which on this December day I find in Palestine disappear, and I see Capernaum as it was when Jesus was pastor of the church here. Look at that wealthy home, the architecture, the marble front, the upholstery, the slaves in uniform at the doorway. It is the residence of a courtier of Herod, probably Chuza by name, his wife Joanna, a Christian disciple. But something is the matter. The slaves are in great excitement, and the

TWO STRANGE SUITS.

A Married Woman Suing an Ex-Winnipegger for Breach of Promise.

The Chicago Journal of Saturday has the following:

"Two suits, one for $50,000 and the other for $100,000 damages, were begun in the Circuit Court on Wednesday and suppressed until to-day, against Robert A. Davis, a man of considerable wealth, residing on Exchange avenue, South Chicago.

"In the first case Mrs. Matilda Bruns and her husband, Henry A. Bruns, seek to recover $50,000 from Mr. Davis for alleged libel, while the second action is brought by Mrs. Bruns individually for alleged breach of promise of marriage.

"Were we disposed to talk about this matter, we could tell a very interesting story, one you very seldom read about," said attorneys Crews and Owen, when asked why they brought the litigation. "After a consultation with my partner," continued Mr. Crews, we have decided to make no statements. If we did, there would be a cry of 'blackmail,' and we do not want to try this case through the newspapers, but in court. You had better see the defendant, and if he is willing to say anything, then I will give the plaintiff's side of the case."

"You can at least tell me on what subject I can interview the defendant?" suggested the reporter.

"Ask him how young Mrs. Bruns was when he first met her; where it was, and what position he occupied; whether he promised to marry her, and where a certain child is at present, etc., and you may find out something."

It was learned, however, that Mr. Davis was at one time Premier in Manitoba, Canada, and that he came here about nine years ago and invested several thousand dollars in Chicago real estate. Not until Matilda's marriage with Mr. Bruns did he become aware of the strong relations stated, and it is said the loss of the child so worried her that she was forced to disclose the secret to her husband. An effort will be made to get the child and to have Davis right the wrong.

THE CRY OF MILLIONS.

OH, MY BACK!
STOP IT NOW,
SOON IT WILL BE TOO LATE.

I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought advice from different physicians without relief. About the 12th of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me in such a manner that I was bent over. When I sat down it was almost impossible for me to get up alone, or to put on my clothes, when kind Providence sent Dr. Henley, with the OREGON KIDNEY TEA, to my hotel. I immediately commenced using the tea. It had an almost miraculous effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days, I am happy to state, that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.

A SAIL ON THE LAKE.

courtier living there runs down the front steps and takes a horse and puts him at full run across the country. The boy of that nobleman is dying of typhoid fever. All the doctors have failed to give relief. But about five miles up the country, at Cana, there is a divine doctor. Jesus by name, and the agonized father has gone for him, and with what earnestness those can understand who have had a dying child in the house. This courtier cries to Christ, "Come down ere my child die!"

While the father is absent, and at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, the people watching the dying boy see a change in the countenance, and Joanna, the mother, on one side of his couch, says: "Why, this darling is getting well; the fever has broken. See the prespiration on his forehead. Did any of you give him any new kind of medicine?" "No," is the answer. The boy turns on his pillow, his delirium gone, and asks for something to eat and says: "Where's father?" Oh, he has gone up to Cana to get a young doctor of about 31 years of age. But no doctor is needed now in this house at Capernaum. The people look at the sun dial to see what time it is, and see it is just past noon and 1 o'clock Then they start out and meet the returning father and as soon as they come within speaking distance they shout at the top of their voices: "Your boy is getting well." "Is it possible?" says the father. "When did the change for the better take place?" "One o'clock" is the answer. "Why," says the courtier, "that is just the hour that Jesus said to me 'Thy son liveth.' One o'clock!"

GLADNESS ON THEIR COUNTENANCE.

As they gather at the evening meal what gladness on all the countenances in that home at Capernaum! The mother, Joanna, has not had sleep for many nights, and she now falls off into delightful slumber. The father, Chuza, the Herodian courtier, worn out with anxiety as well as by the rapid journey to and from Cana, is soon in restful unconsciousness. Joanna was a Christian before, but I warrant she was more of a Christian afterward. Did the father Chuza accept the Christ who had cured his boy? Is there in all the earth a parent so ungrateful for the convalescence or restoration of an imperiled child as not to go into a room and kneel down and make surrender to the almighty love that came to the rescue?

Do not mix up this case with the angry discussions about Christian science, but accept the doctrine, as old as the Bible, that God does answer prayer for the sick. That Capernaum boy was not the only illustration of the fact that prayer is mightier than a typhoid fever. And there is not a doctor of large practice but has come into the sick room of some hopeless case and, in a cheerful manner if he were a Christian, or with a bewildered manner if he were a skeptic, said: "Well, what have you been doing with this patient? What have you been giving him? The pulse is better. The crisis is past. After all, I think he will get well." Prayer will yet be acknowledged in the world's materia medica, and the cry is just as appropriate now as when Chuza, the courtier from Capernaum, uttered in Christ's hearing, "Come down ere my child die!"

If the prayer be not answered in the way we wish, it is because God has something better for the child than earthly recovery, and there are thousands of men and women now alive in answer to fathers' and mothers' prayers, myself one of the multitude. For I have heard my parents tell how when at three years of age scarlet fever seemed to have done its full work on me, and the physicians had said there was no more use of their coming and they had left a few simple directions to make the remaining hours peaceful, and according to the custom in those times in country places the neighbors had already come in and made the shroud, the forlorn case suddenly brightened and the prayer "Come down ere my child die!" was answered in a recovery that has not been followed by a moment's sickness from that time to this.

PRAYER THE MIGHTIEST AGENCY.

The mightiest agency in the universe is prayer, and it turns even the Almighty. It decides the destinies of individuals, families and nations. During our sad civil war a gentleman was a guest at the White House in Washington, and he gives this incident. He says: "I had been spending three weeks in the White House with Mr. Lincoln as his guest. One night—it was just after the battle of Bull Run—I was restless and could not sleep. I was repeating the part which I was to take in a public performance. The hour was past midnight. Indeed, it was coming near to the dawn when I heard low tones proceeding from a private room where the president slept. The door was partly open. I instinctively walked in, and there I saw a sight which I shall never forget. It was the president kneeling before an open Bible.

"The light was turned low in the room. His back was turned toward me. For a moment I was silent as I stood looking in amazement and wonder. Then he cried out in tones so pitiful and sorrowful: 'Oh, thou God that heard Solomon in the night when he prayed for wisdom, hear me! I cannot lead this people, I cannot guide the affairs of this nation without thy help. I am poor and weak and sinful. Oh, God, who didst hear Solomon when he cried for wisdom, hear me and save the nation!" You see we don't need to go back to Bible times for evidence that prayer is heard and answered.

But some one may say that Christ at Capernaum healed that courtier's child, yet would not have done it for one in humble life. Why, in that very Capernaum he did the same thing for a dying slave he longing to the man who had made a present to the town of the church of which Jesus was pastor, the synagogue among whose ruins I today leap from fragment to fragment. This was the cure of a Roman soldier's slave, whose only acknowledged rights were the wishes of his owner. And none are now so enslaved or so humble or so sick or so sinful but the all sympathetic Christ is ready to help them, ready to cure them, ready to emancipate them. Hear it! Pardon for all. Mercy for all. Help for all. Comfort for all. Heaven for all. Oh, this lake Galilee! What a refreshment for Christ it must have been after sympathizing with the sick, and raising the dead, and preaching to the multitudes all day long to come down on these banks in the night time, and feel the cool air of the sea on his hot face, and look up to the stars, the lighted lamps around the heavenly palaces from which he had descended!

All heaven and earth were still; from the high post
Of stars to the hilled lake and moonlit coast
All heaven and earth were still—though not in sleep,
But breathless, as we grow when feeling most.

"But," says some one, "why was it that Christ, coming to save the world, should spend so much of his time on and around so solitary a place as Lake Galilee? There is only one city of any size on its beach, and both the western and eastern shores are a solitude, broken only by the sounds coming from the mud hovels of the degraded. Why did not Christ begin at Babylon the mighty, at Athens the learned, at Cairo the historic, at Thebes the hundred gated, at Rome the triumphant? If Christ was going to save the world, why not go where the world's people dwell? Would a man, wishing to revolutionize for good the American continent, pass his time amid the fishing huts on the shores of Newfoundland?"

My friends, Galilee was the hub of the wheel of civilization and art, and the center of a population that staggers realization. On the shore of the lake we sail today stood nine great cities—Scythopolis, Tarich, Hippos, Gamala, Chorazin, Capernaum, Bethsaida, Magdala, Tiberias—and many villages the smallest of which had 15,000 inhabitants, according to Josephus, and reaching from the beach back into the country in all directions. Palaces, temples, coliseums, gymnasiums, amphitheatres, towers, gardens terraced on the hillsides, fountains bewildering with sunlight, baths upon whose mosaic floors kings trod; while this lake, from where the Jordan enters it to where the Jordan leaves it, was beautiful with all styles of shallop or dreadful with all kinds of war galley. Four thousand ships, history says, were at one time upon these waters. Battles were fought there, which shocked all nations with their consequences.

In her last throes Judaea fought with Rome.

Upon those sea fights looked Vespasian and Titus and Trajan and whole empires. From one of these naval encounters so many of the dead floated to the beach they could not soon enough be entombed, and a plague was threatened. Twelve hundred soldiers escaping from these vessels of war were one day massacred in the amphitheatre at Tiberias. For three hundred years that almost continuous city encircling Lake Galilee was the metropolis of our planet. It was to the very heart of the world that Jesus came to soothe its sorrows, and pardon its sins, and heal its sick, and emancipate its enslaved and reanimate its dead.

TAKE THE SUGGESTION.

And let the church and the world take the suggestion. While the solitary places are not to be neglected, we must strike for the great cities, if this world is ever to be taken for Christ. Evangelize all the earth except the cities and in one year the cities would corrupt the earth. But bring the cities and all the world will come. Bring London and England will come. Bring Paris and France will come. Bring Berlin and Germany will come. Bring St. Petersburg and Russia will come. Bring Vienna and Austria will come. Bring Cairo and Egypt will come. Bring the near three million people in this cluster of cities on the Atlantic coast and all America will soon see the salvation of God. Ministers of religion! let us intensify our evangelism. Editors and publishers! purify your printing presses! Asylums of mercy! enlarge your plans of endeavor!

And instead of this absurd and belittling and wicked rivalry among our cities as to which happens to have the most men and women and children, not realizing that the more useless and bad people a city has the worse it is off, and a city which has ten thousand good people is more to be admired than a city with one hundred thousand bad people, let us take a moral census, and see how many good men and good women are leading forth, how large a generation of good children who will consecrate themselves and consecrate the round world to holiness and to God. Oh, thou blessed Christ, who didst come to the mighty cities encircling Lake Galilee! come in mercy to all our great cities of today.

Thou who didst put thy hand on the white mane of the foaming billows of Gennesaret and make them lie down at thy feet, hush all the raging passions of the world! Oh, thou blessed Christ, who on the night when the disciples were trying to cross this lake and "the wind was contrary," after nine hours of rowing had made only three miles, didst come stepping on water that at the touch of thy foot hardened into crystal, meet all our shipping, whether on placid or stormy seas, and say to all thy people now, by whatever style of tempest tossed or driven, as thou didst to the drenched disciples in the cyclone: "Be of good cheer. It is I. Be not afraid!"

Thank God that I have seen this lake of Christly memories, and I can say with Robert McCheyne, the ascended minister of Scotland, who, seated on the banks of this lake, wrote in his last, sick days, and just before he crossed the Jordan, not the Jordan that empties into Galilee, but the Jordan that empties into the "sea of glass mingled with fire," these sweet words, fit to be played by human fingers on strung strings of earthly lute, or by angelic fingers on seraphic harps:

It is not that the wild gazelle
Comes down to drink thy tide,
But he that was pierced to save from hell
Oft wandered by thy side.
Graceful around thee the mountains meet,
Thou calm, reposing sea;
But ah! far more, the beautiful feet
Of Jesus walked o'er thee.
O Saviour! gone to God's right hand,
Yet the same Saviour still,
Graved on thy heart is this lovely strand
And every fragrant hill.

A MOONSHINER'S REVENGE.

Plot for a Sensational Novel from the Georgia Court Records.

A few years ago among the moonshiners in the Fulton County prison was Walter Blackman, says the Atlanta Journal. On the night of December 12 Blackman and Miss Lulu Hicks were to be married. The guests had all arrived, among whom was a young man named George Blakesley, who had been a suitor for Miss Hicks' hand. Blakesley was a moonshiner himself, or had been, but had lately traveled about considerably. The justice was preparing his papers and the bride and groom made their appearance from an adjoining room.

There was a sound of horses' feet upon the frozen ground outside. More guests arriving? In a few moments a dozen revenue officers armed to the teeth entered the room and placed Blackman under arrest. The bridegroom was taken to Atlanta, and there was no wedding.

At the trial Blakesley was the principal witness, and he testified as to how he had pointed out the spot where Blackman's still was located and then told the officers of the wedding.

Blackman was sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment. As soon as the trial was over Blakesley hastened back to the home of Miss Hicks and told her that her lover had been sent to prison for life. For three months afterward Blakesley pressed his suit, and Miss Hicks finally married him.

It may have been Blakesley's intention to wait until the twelve months had nearly expired and to then move to some other place with his wife. At the end of six months Blackman was pardoned, and the story of the interrupted wedding had something to do with the executive clemency.

Blackman went to his home and was told of Miss Hicks' marriage. He placed a Winchester on his shoulder, rode over to where Blakesley was living, and calling him to the door, shot him through the heart. Riding hastily away he disappeared in the woods and has never since been seen.

Commercial Correspondence, Accounts, Book-keeping and Pitman's Shorthand,
Have been Leading Subjects in his Teaching.

Students are requested to ask for proofs of the following facts: That after acting as Head Master for a year in Smythe street Academy, Wakefield, he resigned receiving a flattering testimonial and presentation. For eight years after he was Head Master in St. Charles' Grammar School, London, and on his resignation in 1883, he received the highest possible testimonial from his managers. Two years later, on resigning his appointment as Science Lecturer, and First Classical Master in St. Cuthbert's Grammar School, Newcastle, the Lord Bishop of Newcastle, Canon Ramsay, and the managers gave him their highest commendation. After this he became Principal of the New Cross High School, and of Bath House College, Twickenham. From successful students preparing for Cambridge, London, Durham, Trinity, Edinburgh Universities; the Law, Medical, Local, Army, Engineering College, and Science examinations, about 50 letters are open to inspection.

Students can take Single Class Subjects, or the Course, and payments will be monthly.

A large number of Rooms are Furnished

OUR "RESPONSIBLE" GOVERNMENT.

It is passing strange that the policy of a party, as badly discredited as the Colonist alleges the Opposition to be, should be adopted by the Government. It would be supposed that, unpopular as the Opposition, as charged by our contemporary, their policy would be about the last thing the Government would steal, and resort to a dubious practice to get it. The Opposition is no good but the Government steals their policy! It is proper to say in this connection, that if the Colonist had the faintest notion of political consistency it would advert to the Opposition in respectful terms. According to the precept and practice of responsible government, it is not customary for the "ins" to steal the policy of the "outs," and employ an Order-in-Council to do it. The Colonist seems to have no idea of the amount of stultification involved in this operation, and proudly points to responsible government as superior to the American system. The TIMES approves of responsible government. It prefers that system to the American, but it assures the Colonist that unless the idea of responsible government is carried out more faithfully than is the custom now-a-days, it is a system which is likely to fall into contempt. The TIMES has invited the Colonist to give the public a dissertation on Orders-in-Council as employed by the Quintette. The Colonist replies by kicking at the American political system. Reconcile the ways of the Hon. JOHN ROBSON to responsible government, O! Colonist, before you go abroad for editorial provender.

HOW SHOULD CRIMINALS BE TREATED?

A writer in the Popular Science Monthly, inspired by the assassination of Chief of Police HENNESSY, of New Orleans, inquires, "What shall we do with the Dago?" This question would seem to concern the people of the United States alone, as Canada has not yet become the rendezvous of the offscourings of Europe. The fact, however, that the writer raises the question of jail and prison treatment in conjunction with his interrogatory, gives the subject a broader scope, makes it indeed, a pertinent subject for reformers everywhere to ponder over. These people, says the writer, the "dagoes," who are now seeking these shores are from the Mediterranean, and are known in that quarter of the world as the lazzaroni. It is said of them, that in Italy they do not know what a house means, except for shelter against inclement weather; while, except for the water that falls from the heavens, their bodies are unfamiliar with it.

Speaking of the dietary habits of these creatures, the writer gives an instance that came under his personal observation.

A small circus, with a few lions and tigers, exhibited in a town, nearby where a railroad was being constructed, and as a part of their programme fed their beasts. The bones which the beasts knawed were left on the ground, and when the circus departed the "dagoes" collected these bones and boiled them for soup. "What terrors," the writer asks, "have jails and prisons for such human beings? The point," continues the writer, "in civilization to which the world has arrived renders it impossible that the inmates of prisons should be starved, frozen or tortured into imbecility. But the question as to how tenderly they should be treated, how delicately cared for, and how comfortably their wants provided for, appear not yet to have been submitted to anything like a concensus of public opinion. Such a question, as a matter of fact, appears to be left at large until selected as a sentimental one for ladies and gentlemen of sympathetic natures and leisure for philanthropies bent, and the result is, that when anything is done toward the adding of yet one more burden upon the law-abiding and uncriminal classes, to wit, the providing of increased consolations, if not luxuries, for their law breaking and criminal brothers and sisters. When we tax the good man for the benefit of the bad man, we ought to tax him as lightly as possible. When the peaceful and useful citizen is assessed to build prisons for the housebreaker and molester of the public quiet, he doubtless should be assessed roundly enough to keep the unruly class secure from the facilities for working further mischief, and further, the prison should be clean enough, and well enough drained; and wholesome enough to prevent the criminals from negatively breeding infection among the honest people they no longer affirmatively rob, disturb and destroy. There ought to be no hesitation about going as far as this. The question is, how much further? A prison is not supposed to be a nice, cosy place to live in. It should not be a desirable place for even the criminal classes. Neither the criminal classes, nor the classes from which criminals come, live and dress warmly; their shoes are not dry; their bodies are not well kept; their tables are not regularly or sumptuously or even wholesomely spread. Poverty certainly should not be allowed to aggravate the crime: but it would seem, as if, in the enforcement of the penalty, it cannot be entirely left out of the estimates taken by law makers that the condition of a prisoner should be superior to the condition he has just left. Jail soup may be thin but let the man who loves not thin soup keep out of jail. And let the soup be not thicker than at least the thinnest obtainable outside. Nothing, of course, should be allowed to antagonize the laws of humanity, or, in a large sense, the laws of charity. But to whom is charity to be shown? Which class of humanity deserves the largest charity? Is it Christian to expect the honest man who forever pays tithes of his toil to experiment on the reformation of the man whose ancestral traditions compel him or incite him to toil not, but to break in and help himself to the fruits of the honest man's toil? Ten minutes inspection of the haunts of crime in the city of New York ought to convince the daintiest of bric a brac ladies and gentlemen of the danger of a too well appointed, a too substantially fed and a too well librared prison. What disgrace is a year or ten years in prison to a nomad, a man from nowhere, and who has no character to lose? We must build prisons, somehow or other, which will be less desirable abiding places than the slums. If this cannot be done what shall be done with the "dago." And here the application comes in. It may be asked in this relation what is to be done with criminals to the manor born. If our jails and prisons offer conditions of living superior to the slums are they really a punishment? In-as-much as the average criminal hates work, let work be his punishment. Give the criminal warm quarters and feed him well, but make him work. It may be supposed that had BIRCHALL been sent up for life at hard labor he would have exclaimed like CAIN that his punishment was greater than he could bear. Work! work! The criminal class hate work, therefore make them work. We talk of the cruelty of the galleys! It is beginning to look as if we should have to adopt some of the methods of the ancients. Kid glove penitentiaries if not putting a premium on crime at least rob enforced seclusion of half its terrors.

PAYMENT OF JURORS.

The grand jury at the Nanaimo assizes recommended that jurymen be paid five dollars per day. The Free Press says formerly jurymen were compelled to give their services gratuitously, but the government of the time was induced to provide for remuneration for petty jurymen at $1.50 per day. Our contemporary adds:

The payment of this amount was an admission of the soundness of the principle, but it is not at all sufficient in amount, nor at all proportionately distributed. The judges, the court officials, the witnesses, the constables, and the "lawyer for the crown" are all paid and well paid by the tax-payers, and the Free Press asks where is the justice in asking the jurymen to do their work, the most important of all in our present judicial system, either for nothing in the case of grand jurors, or for a pittance of $1.50 per diem for petty jurors. It must be generally admitted fact that $1.50 per diem is no recompense for a man losing his work in the mine or the workshop, and being compelled often to board and lodge at an hotel in the city during the Assize, his home being too far distant to allow of his going there for meals during the session of the court. While agreeing with the grand jury that all jurymen should be paid and paid liberally for their anything but pleasant duties, the Free Press takes exception to the amount being fixed at any one sum per diem. The reasons for this position are, that the jurymen are taken from the list by ballot, and one man may have to come twenty miles from his residence to the court house, while another juryman would not have twenty yards to go. In a case of this kind it would not be justice to pay each of these men the same amount of pay per diem. The near resident could go to his home or meals and lodging, while the far away juryman would have to be at the expense of coming that five, ten or twenty miles as it might be, and for his hote bill as well. The near by juryman would take home his full per diem allowance, while the distant juryman would find a similar allowance swallowed up in outside expenses, and would get home perhaps actually out of a certain amount of cash over that which he had received, and his time count for nothing. By all means let the recommendations of the grand jury be carried out, and pay all jurymen, but let it be on a basis that is equitable and fair. Their pay in every instance should be sufficient to secure themselves and families from any actual loss in cash.

YES, WE COULD "LICK" YOU.

The Oregonian, discussing "our northern frontier," finds that in the event of war, Canada could make a stout and even successful defence. That paper says:

"Canada could put into the field at once 250,000 excellent men, and, if necessary could swell this to 550,000. All the arms necessary could be obtained from England in ten days. The South with the natural strength of a frontier like that of Canada, with the active aid of England's army, navy, arsenals and dockyards, would in 1861-65 have bid us defiance and probably would have beaten us back to our trenches. War with England to-morrow in our present unprepared condition, would find us with an equally hard nut to crack in shape of Canada, for against Canada's 550,000 we could not under our present military system, array more than 800,000 men, allowing for the troops necessary to protect our communications and extensive and defenceless sea coast. The Canadian railway system has ample rolling stock to concentrate troops to defend the Canadian canals from seizure for thirteen days, or until the British gunboat fleet has arrived and passed through in safety to conquest."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

HENRY M. STANLEY, remarks the Toronto World, "is rapidly acquiring a passion for roasting somebody." The World will do well to recollect that the "roasting" business was not begun by STANLEY. Envy commenced the game and STANLEY is getting back at it with interest. It is really too bad that STANLEY refuses to remain quiet in the interest of a pampered, passionate army officer and an egotistical savant, together with some other dudes and incompetents.

English delegates on the Argentine committee have decided to oppose any advances to the Argentine Republic involving a preferential security over existing creditors and advise the funding of coupons of the national and external bonds of the Republic for three years, during which time the greatest possible amount of inflated paper currency will be withdrawn and burned. This will give breathing time and prevent the stoppage of payment of interest. The proposed new funded bonds will be secured by customs receipts. The committee have come to the conclusion that if exchange were only at par, or even at a moderate premium, the Argentine government could be pronounced solvent.

The librarian of Harvard College is of the opinion that athletics are run mad. Writing from Scotland to the New York Nation, he says that he finds the athletic craze and canker is working the same detriment here that it is working in the American colleges. He quotes a close observer as saying to him: "If you want to see how intellect can be degraded you have only to glance at a group of cricketers in photographs and see it in their faces." One reason for the craze, he is of the opinion, is, that colleges nowadays are frequented by so many young men who have no serious aim in life, and who naturally give their thoughts to whatever they find most amusing and fashionable. If this is so, then nobody need worry. The disease of athletics will soon cure itself. It is most extraordinary, however, that even young men who have no serious aim in life should find anything in football worthy of more than a passing thought.

If General BOOTH has had reason to think that his labors as a Christian worker were not appreciated at their full value by religious denominations, he certainly now has little reason to complain in this respect. Since the publication of his book Christian sympathy has been aroused among the churches, and the general is the recipient of words of cheer and comfort all around. Cardinal MANNING has congratulated him, adding that the Salvation Army movement "was of itself a remarkable incident." The bishops of the Anglican Church have been not less ready to testify to the wisdom of Gen. BOOTH's project, and some have even gone further and expressed sympathy for the general in the loss of his wife. The growth of the Salvation Army has been something wonderful. It numbers to-day 9,000 officers, 13,000 voluntary workers, 3,000 centres of effort in various parts of the world, 30 rescue homes for fallen women, 5 nightshelters and 3 food depots. "It is remarkable," says the Toronto Mail, "that the founder of a movement, at first despised, and until recently scarcely tolerated, should gain for his design the approval and assistance of the great divines of the day. Still more so is it that the different denominations should practically unite in the forwarding of probably the greatest religious enterprise of the age. The fact is Gen. BOOTH has struck the keynote of Christianity—charity." What Gen. BOOTH has experienced is peculiar to all reformers. BOOTH has been fortunate, however, compared with men of his class. Not like CHRIST must he wait for posterity to do him justice.

THE MARKET.

TO THE EDITOR:—The market by-law having been accepted by the ratepayers, at present juncture, having in view the ultimate success of the scheme, a few suggestions emanating from a wide field of former experience, which elicited plain substantial facts regarding the working and success of public markets elsewhere, may be found acceptable to your readers.

A public market should, in my humble opinion, be in a measure governed by local surroundings and requirements. Those of Victoria are peculiar. Here we have a large fish and game supply constantly pouring in from the immediate surroundings, while that of farm produce are mainly drawn from outside the Island of Vancouver, and distributed to the consumers through the agency of our commission merchants. Now, it seems to me that the chief end of a public market for Victoria is to act as an impetus to the producer in the immediate vicinity, while at the same time affording facilities calculated to create competition and consequent cheapness to the consumer according to supply and demand. However, it must be left to the future to work out that problem. The principal things to be now considered are: the location of the site, and the plan on which a suitable building should be erected. A building, while meeting the necessity of present requirements, should be one constructed on a plan that will afford extension in case of need.

Some predict that the market building here will remain for some time, if not for all time, a kind of municipal ornament and folly, with a visionary prospect of ultimate utility. To dispel that idea and remove a erronious impression the great aim of the corporation should be to make the market as attractive as possible. Therefore, the proposed building should be artistic in design, combining lightness and beauty of structure with stability; its interior should also be made as attractive as possible, a kind of popular resort and promenade where people of all classes, degrees and conditions will be induced to congregate, some for display and sight-seeing, others for the more practicable business of economical housekeeping.

The market being thus made a resort and promenade, there will be no fear of ultimate success. Had Victoria a working white population instead of Chinese, as at present, there would be no question of success. The minor details as to superintendance and management, are almost universal in use. The main point is to make the place attractive in every degree; then will producer, commission merchant, middleman and consumer alike furnish the Victoria market an ever-increasing flow of patronage. Such has been the result elsewhere, and there seems no reason why a like result should not be attained here in Victoria.

BRIEF LOCALS.

The Day's Doings in City and Province Briefly Related.

The married ladies club will give their dance as usual Tuesday evening in Philharmonic Hall.

Gum Boots, Rubbers, Arctics, &c. for everybody, at Erskine's, 132 Government street, corner Johnson.

An address will be given to young men at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to morrow at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.

A very enjoyable time was spent last evening in the Odd Fellows' hall when the orchestra of that body gave a hop.

The funeral of W. J. Whitmarsh will take place from the hospital to-morrow and will be attended by the St. George's Society.

It is said that the first grain elevator to be erected in British Columbia will be on the banks of the Fraser, at the new town of Liverpool.

The Young Men's Institute of Nanaimo will hold their annual banquet Monday evening when Father Van Nevel will deliver the principal address.

The police returns of the quarter ending to-day show a total of 108 convictions under the by-laws and 34 under the statutes, 137 offences altogether.

Finnen Haddes, Yarmoth Bloaters, Labrador Herring, Cod Fish, large, pure boneless Cod Fish, Red Herrings, (Logers), Dutch Herrings. R. H. Jameson.

A company of Montreal capitalists has been incorporated under the Companies act as The Dominion Cotton Mills company, with a capital of $100,000.

The Westminster Truth states that a new officer on that city's police force steps so heavy that the sound of his footsteps is heard all over town. A big feat, surely.

A meeting of the canvassing committee of Christ Church cathedral will be held at an early date to report progress. This, it is stated, has been of a highly encouraging nature.

Services at the pro-cathedral to-morrow will be at 8 o'clock a.m. (low mass); 10:30 high mass, at which Right Rev. Bishop Lemmens will preach; and the evening service, consisting of Benediction, at 7 p.m.

We are pleased to inform our patrons, who have been waiting for our handsome Xmas chairs, that they have arrived, and as they are sure to sell quickly, an early inspection is invited. Hastle & Erskine, 62 Government St. tf

David Cunningham, a leading citizen and contractor, of Kingston, Ontario, was killed yesterday by a block of stone falling from the third story of the new wing at the penitentiary and striking him on the head. He was a brother of Mr. James Cunningham, of Westminster, B. C.

John Weiler, 51 to 55 Fort street, has just opened his first arrival of library and table lamps for holiday trade. The goods are finished is bisque and decorated to perfection. Also a nice assortment of umbrella lamp shades, all sizes and colors, which are now all the rage.

One of the teams of the Victoria Transfer company became restive on Wharf street last evening, and ran down one of the wharf approaches. A broken shaft and a bit of a flurry was the extent of the damage, which would have been greater, had the team not been deftly turned from running off the wharf.

CLANCY'S OPINION.

Yesterday's Meeting in London—Press Refused Admission.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—It is now conceded that Parnell has completely diverted issue between himself and his opponents from one of moral consideration to political. In the latter field he is invincible as compared with his antagonist, and the result is a foregone conclusion. His victory amazes even those who had entertained high opinions of his qualities as a manipulator. He has turned the tables upon Gladstone, and many think he has placed the latter statesman in a position from which Parnell alone can enable him to emerge with any credit. Parnell will go before the Irish people in a blaze of glory, the sole effect of the revolt against him apparently having been to prove how much superior he is to other Irish politicians, and how indispensible he is to the Irish nation.

LONDON, Dec. 5.—The following is all that is obtainable in regard to the Clancy compromise: When the first deputation waited upon him, Mr. Gladstone suggested that Clancy's resolution be modified. He objected to any reference being made to the differences between Parnell and himself. He was willing to discuss matters having a definite bearing upon the situation apart from any retrospection, but desired no reference, directly or indirectly, to the question of Parnell's leadership. He informed the deputation of the decision of Sir Vernon Harcourt and Mr. Morley not to take part in the conference, and suggested that their names be omitted from the resolution. If these suggestions were agreed to he was willing to enter further into the subject. The delegates reported Mr. Gladstone's proposals to the meeting, Parnell presiding. An amicable discussion followed.

John Redmond moved to rescind the Clancy resolution. Mr. Sexton seconded the motion, and it was unanimously carried. Mr. Redmond moved a resolution authorizing Messrs. Leamy, Redmond, Healy and Sexton to request a conference with Gladstone for the purpose of representing the views of the Irish party and requesting an intimation of the intentions of Gladstone and his colleagues in respect to certain details connected with the land question and the Irish police in the event of home rule being granted.

Sexton seconded the motion and it was carried with only two dissenting votes, those of Barry and Chance. The meeting adjourned and the new deputation immediately sought Gladstone and imparted to him the purport of the resolution. Gladstone convened an informal meeting of his available colleagues in his private room in the House of Commons. Harcourt, John Morley, Granville, Arnold and others responded. Soon afterward Gladstone intimated through the whips that a second interview with the deputation was unnecessary. The resolution and written statement of the committee having put him in full possession of the facts, Parnell has decided to postpone a further meeting until to-morrow. At midnight no reply had been received from Gladstone, but one is expected early in the morning.

Harrington has cabled Parnell advising him to stand firm, and assuring him that the Americans are with him.

CHICAGO, Dec. 5.—The Irish envoys, all of them, are still in Chicago, and the indications are that they will remain here until the parliamentary party in London has decided one way or the other the question of the leadership. They are now hopeful that the threatened troubles can be averted, and that they will be able to resume their tour of the country with the memorable motto of "Peace with Honor" inscribed on their banner.

The most important of the cablegrams received by the envoys to-day was that from Alderman Hooper, proprietor of the Cork Daily Herald, and a powerful element in the Nationalists councils. In substance it was to the effect that the delegation need not in the least fear the opinion of Ireland on the question at issue, but that it was eminently desirable that the delegation should make some further expression of opinion, additional to its manifesto of Sunday last for the guidance of the people of Ireland. This dispatch was followed soon afterwards by another from the same source, emphasizing the desirability, not to say the necessity, of another manifesto. The members of the delegation, Harrington included, were hurriedly summoned to a conference. Their deliberations occupied the better portion of an hour, and, as an outcome, Wm. O'Brien was authorized to reply. He did so in these words: "We have kept silent out of respect to the deliberations of our colleagues, relying with confidence upon the matured judgment of the Irish party and the Irish people. We ask you not to be misled by any hasty or ill-formed American telegrams. It is our judgment that sober opinion here is overwhelmingly with us, and we are satisfied, that the daily papers of the United States, without exception, supports us in the belief that Gladstone's bona fides is unimpeachable, and that the disruption of the Liberal alliance means destruction at the coming general elections. If the Irish party comes to a prompt decision, it is our conviction that the Irish cause will occupy a more impregnable position than ever."

Harrington it is understood dissented from one of the sentences in this dispatch, and it was therefore sent as the expression of opinion of Dillon, O'Brien Gill, O'Connor, and Sullivan.

Perfectly Secret.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The Irish national ist conference with Parnell in the chair met at noon, and resumed deliberations. Extraordinary precautions were taken to preserve absolute secrecy as to the proceedings. The lobby and approaches to conference room were cleared, reporters of press being rigorously excluded as were others who had gathered in the vicinity.

In the Far West.

Away west in British Columbia, Hagyard's Yellow Oil is known and valued highly as at home in Toronto. Miss Eleanor Pope, of Port Haney, B. C., says: "For sore throat, coughs, croup, bruises, etc., Hagyard's Yellow Oil is the best thing I have ever used."

Wonderful Words! Beautiful Words!

When Professor Morse returned from Europe to America in 1844, he proceeded at once to Washington to induce the House of Representatives to grant an appropriation of $30,000 for the completion of a telegraph line between Washington and Baltimore. The matter was then referred to the Senate for final action, and on the last night of the session it was passed. Morse was informed of the result of the vote by Miss Ellsworth, who had greatly assisted him by her influence. The line was completed, and Miss Ellsworth had Morse's promise that she would have the privilege of sending the first message. Morse had business in New York, and had just money enough to pay his expenses there and back. On his return he at once sent for Miss Ellsworth and after ascertaining that the line was in order he asked her what message he would send for her; she immediately replied: "What hath God wrought?" Words that ought to be written in characters of living light.

Since that time the great telegraphic system has been a boon, and a source of priceless value to mankind. Paine's Celery Compound came to the rescue of the sick and perishing at a time when it was greatly needed. Professor Edward E. Phelps, M. D., L. L. D., gave to the world and to its suffering ones, a remedy for the stay of disease and death, which it never had before. It held out to the weak, nervous, and sleepless victim the beautiful motto, "Use and Find Life;" and those who had faith and used it, were restored to their friends and made whole in mind and body.

Since its introduction thousands in all lands have been restored to health and strength, to sing its praises and to recommend it to others.

Sufferer, from whatever form of nervous disease you may suffer, use Paine's Celery Compound; it possesses to-day the same healing powers, as in the days of its great originator. It will cleanse and thoroughly invigorate the whole system, and give a tone and vim to the body which will enable you to sleep well, and live happy.

SEALER NOTES.

The big pile driver of the C. P. N. Co. has been fitted with a new hoisting engine.

The schooner E. B. Marvin has been overhauled and a new galley built. Her general appearance has also been much improved.

Work on the Lilly is rapidly going on at Turpel's ways. Capt. Buckman will have a good serviceable boat when she is ready for sea.

The lines for the new schooner for Capt. Cox and others, are being laid down by Mr. McC. Smith at the Star yard. The keel of the new boat was laid to-day.

The schooners Maggie Mac and Triumph are being fitted with new cabins more comfortable and commodious, for the use of the hunters. The former vessel has completed her alterations and is much improved thereby.

A Grip on Tomatoes.

The Yankee has got the grip on canned tomatoes, and even if a raw carrot is dropped into a can occasionally to fill up the consumer overlooks it on the ground of accident. American tomatoes are now sold in every country on the globe, and are as familiar in Borneo as in Chicago.

A One-Sided Discussion.

A Wisconsin court has decided that a man has a lawful right to open his wife's letters. Now, if we could get a binding judicial decision which would compel a husband to mail his wife's letters within a week after she gives them to him to post—but that would be requiring a moral impossibility.

THE providing of one's own soap at hotels! Permit me to remark that this is one of those things

Where William Penn Is Buried.

Few people, perhaps, are aware that William Penn is buried in England, writes Eugene Field in the Chicago News. His last resting-place is at a small village, Jordan's, within a few miles of London. Several years ago a wealthy American expended £300 in securing and setting up guide-posts pointing the way to the spot where the grand old Quaker sleeps his last sleep. I have tried to learn the name of that American, but so far I have failed. I suspect that Mr. George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, was the man.

"We have an able-bodied young man who is looking for just such a situation, and—" "But I don't want a young man," interrupted the farmer. "I want a man about ninety-seven years old. I have read in the papers about these old fellows sawing a cord of wood before breakfast, and it usually takes a young man all day to peform the job."

OUR OTTAWA LETTER.

THE DOMINION WHISKEY BILL FOR 1890.

Synopsis of the Minister of Inland Revenue's Report for the Past Fiscal Year—The Accrued Revenue—Facts and Figures—Other Matters of Interest.

From our own Correspondent.

OTTAWA, Ont., Dec. 1.—The head officials of the various departments of the public service have been busy for some time past preparing the annual reports of their ministers, which will in most cases be in the hands of the printers at a very early period. In some instances, however, the reports are not closed until the end of the calendar year, and these will not be ready until Parliament meets, when they will be submitted to the House. The report of the Minister of Agriculture, for instance, is one of these. Heretofore it was customary for the ministers to retain their reports in their own possession until Parliament met, no matter what that time might be, nor when they were completed. A change was brought about when the Government established a personal organ of their own, and then the blue books were given out when printed. Some ministers, like the Hon. John Costigan, Minister of Inland Revenue, distributed his report to all newspapers alike, no matter whether Grit or Tory, while others, notably of the Foster calibre, who gave the first reading of his book to a few select Tory newspaper editors, such as the St. John, N.B., Sun, of which he was at one time editor. Under these circumstances which I have just mentioned, it will be no breach of existing rules if I give TIMES readers a synopsis of the report of the Minister of Inland Revenue, which is now in the hands of the printers, and which is likely to be the first one completed.

THE ACCRUED REVENUE.

The accrued internal revenue during the year ending June 30th, 1890, was $7,854,581, compared with 26,974.540 for 1888, or an increase of $880,041. The following summary will show how this is made up.

Excise	$6,692,612	$7,779,616
Public Works	10,457	6,782
Cutting timber	21,416	17,429
Weights and measures	50,634	50,700
Other revenues	21	63
	$6,974,540	$7,854,581

It will be noticed that an increase has taken place in respect of every item upon which excise duties are levied, the main increase—nearly three-quarters of a million—being from spirits. Two-thirds of this increase may be considered as borrowed from the now current fiscal year, inasmuch as it represents duties upon spirits withdrawn from bond during June in view of the provisions of the law as to the maturing of spirits coming into force on and after the 1st of July 1890.

CANADA'S WHISKEY BILL.

The quantity of spirits produced during the year was 5,091,495 proof gallons, as compared with 5,847,508 proof gallons produced in the previous fiscal year. The raw material used in its production was as follows:

Malt	4,290,212
Rye	13,404,186
Indian Corn	66,790,421
Wheat	26,600
Oats	1,021,964
Barley	145,669
	85,682,043

The quantity entered for consumption was 3,521,194 proof gallons, against 2,960,447 proof gallons last year and an average of 2,641,152 proof gallons for the four preceeding years.

CAUSE OF INCREASE.

The increase over last year is due mainly to distillers paying duty during the last part of June on spirits to be held in stock to enable them to meet the wants of the trade in view of the provisions of the Inland Revenue Act as to maturing of spirits coming into force on the first of July 1890. The further increase as compared with the consumption during the four preceeding years may be attributed to the fact that during 1888-89 and 1889-90 methylated spirits, which has been largely used by druggists, ceased to be available, and a larger quantity of duty paid alcohol had to be used. The revenue accruing upon malt used during the year ended June 30th, 1890 was five per cent in excess of the average of the four preceeding years. The quantity exported still declines.

TOBACCO, ETC.

The total amount of tobacco taken for consumption during the year was 9,875,424 lbs. compared with 9,080,269 lbs. for 1889. Duty of $1,896,339 was collected in the latter year and $1,719,067 in the former. The revenue accrued from cigars during the year, including licenses was $693,473 compared with $550,468 for the previous year.

SPORTING NOTES.

Brief Resume of Sporting Matters Here and Elsewhere.

Last week witnessed the close of the legitimate racing season on the American running turf, and when one looks over the record for 1890 the mind is fairly staggered by the enormous development that has of late taken place. It is only a few years ago, less than ten, that the Coney Island Club opened the gates of their new park at Sheepshead Bay and everybody was talking about the magnitude of the enterprise and the colossal accommodation that had been provided, something that was looked upon as being a good deal ahead of any likely requirements. Yet, within a few years, Morris Park blossoms out on a still more extensive scale, and even later, the new Monmouth Park so far eclipses it that the magnates of Sheepshead Bay intend constructing a new stand and other surroundings which they promise shall even exceed the magnificence of Winchester or Monmouth.

Track after track has been constructed in the neighborhood of New York; hundreds of thousands of dollars have been invested and are returning liberal interest, but also away from the metropolis the spirit of improvement is marching onward. At Saratoga there has been a new deal this year, and when the gates of the new park are thrown open to visitors in 1891 they are likely to behold a race course and appointments equal to anything in America. At Chicago the Corrigan's are spending an immense sum of money in building a new track, and, in fact, from all over the country comes news of development and mighty progress.

But it is not only in magnificent properties, immense grand stands and gorgeous club houses that the change is so noteworthy. The liberality of the clubs in adding to the amount given in stakes and purses has kept pace with everything else. Time was when the money value of the English Derby was quoted the world over as the richest plum on the turf in any country, but now it ranks small in comparison with some of the big prizes on the American turf. At Monmouth Park the past summer the club added $245,000, or an average of over nine thousand dollars a day for each of the twenty-six days on which it raced. Sheepshead Bay at their spring and fall meeting gave a grand total in added money of about $230,000; Brooklyn, about $210,000; Morris Park, within a few dollars of the same sum, and Brighton Beach in the neighborhood of $100,000, a grand total of close upon one million of dollars by these five clubs.

An evidence of the value of many of the stakes it is only necessary to name a few of them. The Great Eclipse at Morris Park, $27,385; Junior Champion at Monmouth, $27,000; Great America at Brooklyn, $20,000, and the Futurity at Sheepshead, $77,450. In addition to the doing at the above big meetings it is also noteworthy that over $90,000 was hung up by the Linden Association, and over $100,000 by the New York Jockey Club. These expenditures are simply enormous, but so also are the receipts of the club, take for in a meeting like that at Sheepshead or Monmouth, from seventy-five to one hundred bookmakers do business each day, and to do this they are taxed from seventy to one hundred dollars each, thus from this one source of revenue alone you have from seven to eight thousand dollars a day. Quite a substantial daily addition to the gate receipts. This money was divided up amount a long list of horses of whom we only purpose mentioning a few of the most extensive stables. The Hon. August Belmont heads the lot with $169,615. He is closely followed by Messrs. John A. & A. H. Morris, father and son, with $157,387, of whom Russell won $55,722. Senator Hearst ranks third with $116,225, and of this amount the former's three-year-old Tournament contributed $89,535. Green Morris occupies fourth place with $87,565, and of this sum Strathmeath piled up $40,325.

Lucky Baldwin is next in the procession with $70,955, his biggest winner being Simaloa II. with $26,195. The Algeria stable comes to the front with $68,925, of which Torso is accredited with $22,850. Down in seventh place stands the Dwyers with $57,913 bracketed to their names Enon, Sir John and Kingston contributing in the order named. Mr. Wither's Brookdale stable earned $64,075, while the Beverwyck confederation has a total of $54,540. The California millionaire Haggin, has $52,615 of which the great Salvator piled up $30,650. Capt. Sam Brown, another of the bloated capitalists gathered in $42,234, while the Hough brothers who only started in last year on a very small scale, this year launched out by buying two good horses Come to Taw and Burlington, and thanks to their good judgment they are down for $40,367, of which the three year old Burlington that cost only $7,000, raked them in $30,304, and of the other four horses that composed their string, Drizzle is now winning them money at the winter meetings. Mr. Pulsifer, the owner of the famous Tenny pocketed $39,985, and a whole host of other owners are represented below that figure.

The season of 1890 is also memorable on the running turf for the number of new records that have been made. Ten Broeck's mile in 1.39¾ which had stood since 1877, was wiped off the board at Washington Park, Chicago, in June by the Californian Racine, who put in its place 1.39½. At Monmouth, a little later, the three-year-old Raveloe, on the straight track, ran a mile in 1.39¼, and later on the mighty Salvator did the distance on the straight track in 1.35½. The mark for the three-quarters in 1889 was 1:11, and this season it was cut to 1.10¼ by Fides, the seven furlongs was also lowered by Bella B from 1.26¾ to 1.23½, the 1 1-16 miles was reduced from 1.47¼ to 1.46½, the 1¼ miles from 1.53 to 1.52¾, the 1½ miles from 2.06½ to 2.05 by Salvator and 2.03¾ on a straight track by Banquet; the 1⅝ miles from 2.21½ to 2.20¼ and the 1¾ miles from 2.34 to 2.33 by Firenzi. This is certainly a brilliant showing and will long make memorable the American racing season of 1890. In Canada the two representative turf clubs, the Ontario Jockey Club and the Bel-Air, at Montreal, held successful meetings and the chances are that in 1891 they will issue still more ambitious programmes. Breeders of thoroughbreds have every reason to feel satisfied with the record of the past year and may congratulate themselves upon the brilliant future before them.

CITY AND PROVINCIAL.

A TALE OF THE SEA.

A Fever Stricken Ship Floating Aimlessly on the Ocean.

Mr. M. C. Smith, of the Star shipyard, this city, has received a letter from his brother-in-law, Mr. John McNutt, first officer of the Liverpool bark Lancefield, which at the time the letter was written, Oct. 10th, was on the point of sailing for Callao from Hongkong.

Mr. McNutt in his letter tells of an adventure he had while the Lancefield was on the way to Hongkong. The British bark Guiding Star was sighted in the Indian Ocean and found to be drifting hopelessly about. Closer investigation showed that the captain, first mate, second mate and steward, and three men before the mast were all dead, and that out of the six live men left, five were down sick with fever, from which the others had died. The vessel had been drifting about for 46 days. Mr. McNutt and two sailors from the Lancefield volunteered to take the fever stricken ship to the nearest port, and a course for Batavia was shaped, and after 18 days' sail, during which one more of the crew died, the port of Batavia was reached. Here medical assistance was procured, and the survivors recovered. The amount of salvage was about $5,000, of which Mr. McNutt gets a very tidy sum, which he surely deserves after the great risks he ran in living aboard a vessel where fever had been so rampant. He was taken down himself, and for some weeks after the voyage was over, was very ill and he went to the Hong Kong hospitalto recover.

This incident shows some of the perils of a marine life, and embellished with the pencil of a Clarke Russell would be a dramatic bit of realistic work. Mr. McNutt, who so bravely volunteered to take the fever ship into port, a gold medal presented to him by the King of Normandy and Sweden, he having saved the lives of some sailors from a Scandinavian vessel in the Western Ocean some time ago. Several residents of Victoria know Mr McNutt, and this latest exploit of his will be a source of pride to them.

AFTER THE BOYS' NICKELS.

A Chinese Scheme for Robbing the Newsboys of Their Earnings.

The fines imposed on a number of Chinamen last summer for gambling put a stop to the practice for a time, and in fact not near as much fan tan is played now as before the raids. But a prominent Chinese firm is running a game evidently for the purpose of getting the amount of the fines back from the whites. In a small stinking cabin in a narrow passage way leading from Fisgard street is to be seen almost every evening a crowd of white men and boys, the latter some of the newsboys around the city, hardly ten years old, playing a game called chuck-a-luck. The game is for whites only, and no Celestials are allowed to play. The players are allowed to bet from five cents to $20 but the attendants generally play the former amount, and even grey-headed men sit there night after night and lose or perhaps win a few cents, for the sake of which they ruin their health. The approach of a policeman or suspicious-looking persons, among the latter the reporters, is sent flying along to the cabin, by sentinels who are stationed for a block from the place, and the game is closed and the cabin cleared through several narrow passages.

A man formerly holding a respectable position is one of the principal promoters of the game and his knowledge is use to protect them from the police. An ugly looking Chinaman sits behind an old brandy box shaking the dice, and for the comfort(?) of the players he passes around a box of cigars (?) every few minutes. Boys and men alike puff away at the cabbage leaves, which are enough to ruin the constitution of a Chinaman, let alone white boys. The police have hardly been given a chance to suspect the game as it has only been running for a short time, and they have been closely watched by the almond eyed sentinels under their white general; but they will soon put a stop to it if they only get amongst them once. There is no telling what habit boys might obtain by going around such a place, and the man who acts as kind of runner for the place should be punished severely if there is a law to convict him. A reporter tried to get up to the place a few evenings ago but his approach was announced by three heavy knocks on the outside door, which was repeated within. A man who did go down out of curiosity and was admittted, however, says it is disgraceful.

Christmas Presents.

What more appropriate present than a beautiful engraving or picture? A large and artistic assortment has just arrived. Also a great variety of mouldings at reasonable figures. Come early for choice. JOSEPH SOMMERS,

A Horrible Murder.

A horrible murder involving the loss of one life attracts greater attention than the thousands of deaths occurring annually from scrofula and bad blood. We want to attract attention to Burdock Blood Bitters, the proved and popular remedy for these forms of disease. It cures even old chronic obstinate cases which have defined all other treatment.

A City of the Third Class.

Port Angeles is no longer a town, but a city of the third class. The difference between the two is that a town is restricted to 640 acres, while a city can include as much territory as the authorities want. All that is wanted is the official confirmation of the extension and that has already been made. Mr. Levy was in town last evening and reported the election of the municipal board of councillors. They are: Mayor—W. Brumfield, independent; councillmen—R. R. Harding, L. Levy, D. McInnes, Jas. F. Meagher and D. P. Quinn; treasurer, P. F. Kiernan.

The Latest Craze.

Oxidized silver is the latest craze and has become very fashionable. For instance, Hibben & Co. have for the Christmas trade a large stock of toilet, shaving, smoking and manicure sets, which have the double recommendation of being cheap and pretty presents. The stock is large and well assorted, capable of suiting every taste and every pocket. There is also an excellent assortment of plush goods, which cannot fail to please the eye as well as meet the resources of the pocket. Call and inspect before going elsewhere for your presents.

Must Swear to It.

A dispatch from Ottawa says: It has been decided to require the importers of mining machinery to take a special oath before the officers of the customs whenever a free entry is rendered. The oath is as follows:

"I, the undersigned, importer of machinery mentioned in this entry, do solemnly swear that it is mining machinery within the true meaning of the word, and that at the time of its importation it was of a class and kind not manufactured in Canada," adding the class of mining for which it is to be used and the name of the mines.

The Public Market.

It is understood that the city council at its next meeting will call for tenders for the new market building. The intention is to submit the matter to competition, the best design to be accepted subject to the judgment which the board choose to exercise. Victoria, in the many handsome residences which she boasts, shows undoubted proof of the skill of her architects. The competition will therefore be an interesting one. The outside farmers generally feel satisfied that the institution will be a success if properly administered, and several have signified their intention of taking stalls.

Work to be Renewed.

A new raft is being built at Yale to take the place of one lost some time ago by the Gold Gravels Company, says the Columbian. Not at all disheartened by the accident, Mr. Teague and his colleagues set to work immediately after the casualty to replace the lost machinery, which has now been made ready and when the raft is complete the outfit will be moved across to the flats, it is hoped, in safety. It is not likely much work in the way of washing for the precious metal will be done before spring, but the management expects to have all in readiness by that time for active operations.

St John's Church Bazaar.

The new organ for St. John's church has been ordered and will cost between $4,000 and $5,000. It is not to be expected that the ladies of St John's will meet, in the three days over which their bazaar will extend, with the success which attended the recent bazaar in Cincinatti in aid of the Humane society, when the proceeds amounted to $18,000; but there is no doubt from the efforts being made, that a very substantial proportion will be added to the fund. All the ladies and some of the gentlemen, are working very hard to accomplish a successful result. The bazaar takes place Thursday, Friday and Saturday next in Philharmonic hall, and is promised to be the grandest ever held in Victoria.

The Fat Contributor.

Those who attended the Victoria Theatre last evening, and there were many, announced themselves, by their hearty rounds of applause and laughter, as thoroughly pleased. A. Minor Griswold, editor of the Texas Siftings, who was the entertainer, was introduced by Rev. Jos. Hall, and immediately became a favorite with the audience. His subject was an illustrated tour 'round the world, but before commencing the lecture proper, he confidentially, gave the audience a few anecdotes during his early career in Texas. The illustrations commenced with New York city, and Mr. Griswold took his audience across the Atlantic, through the cities of Europe, Asia, across the Pacific, through California and back home to New York by the Rio Grande & Baltimore railway. The illustrations could not be said to be thoroughly new as "a tour 'round the world" has been the subject of so many lecturers that the principal points in the old continents have been frequently treated. The "fat contributor," however, honeycombed his lecture with humorous sayings and comic pictures which pleased the audience.

The New Store.

It will probably be about the 10th inst. before Pennock & Kingham will be able to display the elegant line of diamonds, jewelry, and silverware which comprises the stock of the new jewelry store to be opened in the building now occupied by Allsop & Mason. Wait and see their new stock before making holiday purchases. d2tf

Pioneers Will Dine.

Around the festive board of the Delmonico this evening will be gathered the pioneers, and as the dinner which has brought them together progresses, they will talk of old times and old timers. The occasion will thus be an interesting one from the fact that it will stir in the hearts of not a few, recollections of the past when Victoria practically was not, and when British Columbia was that unknown west of the Rocky Mountains.

A SITE SECURED.

The Public Market to be a Means of Cleansing Chinatown.

The public market committee this morning purchased the proposed site. The block of land consists of four lots on Fisguard street and four and one half on Cormorant street, about midway between Government and Douglas streets. By its purchase the centre of the city will be cleared from that eyesore to civilisation, the Kwong Lee cabins, as those hideous and dirty domiciles will have to be torn down. Property owners on the adjacent blocks have promised if the market building be erected there that the wretched hovels in the vicinity will also be razed to the ground.

The public market will thus, it is claimed, be a double blessing. Beside being a boon to those who desire it, the building of the market means the doing away with one of the most unsavory spots in the fair city of Victoria. Next summer will in all likelihood see the work completed.

INTERVIEWING THE PREMIER

With Regard to the Better Advertising of British Columbia.

A deputation waited on the Premier this forenoon, their purpose being to ask whether the Government purposed doing anything with a view to bringing the Province, its interests, resources, capabilities and inducements before the public. The deputation, which was under the auspices of the Board of Trade, consisted of Messrs. Thomas Earle, M.P., M. T. Johnson, H. C. Beeton and William Wilson. They were very courteously received by the Premier, to whom they explained the object of their visit. Mr. Robson informed them in reply that he was happy to say that the Government had anticipated their wish. At the present moment they were preparing a pamphlet descriptive of the resources of British Columbia, and with all available information for intending settlers. Owing to the comparative absence of any knowledge of the Province till the present year, it was not possible to lay facts to any extent before intending immigrants. This year the Government had undertaken surveys and as the information came to hand it would be published. It is the intention to continue the surveys. The pamphlet will be ready for the printer within a very short space of time and will be issued as soon as possible.

The deputation thanked the hon. gentleman and withdrew.

IN THE POLICE COURT.

Last Day of the Week Not a Dull One—Drunks at a Discount.

The performance given at the City Police Court this morning was what may be termed a serio-comic affair. The serious part was the charge against H. W. Schubert for alleged attempt to evade the conditions of the City Revenue By-law. Mr. Schubert was summoned as a commercial traveler for not paying the $50 license. The summons was served last evening and a warrant issued for his arrest immediately afterwards. He was found on board the Kingston about to start off, and was conveyed to the police station. The defence so far is that Mr. Schubert was acting for Messrs. Cowan & Wilson who represent, in this city, his house in St. Louis, Mo. The case was adjourned until Monday. Mr. Luxton appearing on behalf of Mr. Bodwell solicitor for defendant.

J. J. Daley, whose story is well known, was the next to come before his honor. The charge of bigamy was read out to him, and his lawyer asked for an adjournment to Tuesday.

George Young's charges made the proceedings a little comical to a certain extent. He stole a revolver from Mattie Smith, who trusted him sufficiently to leave him in charge of the house with the additional responsibility of "pouring out the beer" and "turning in the money." The revolver was produced in court, and his honor asked, apprehensively, whether it was loaded. In the evidence it came out that prisoner followed the dignified calling of feeding birds and writing letters for ladies in houses such as those kept by Mattie Smith. George will feed the birds in the Topaz avenue retreat for the next three months, and if there is not sufficient of this labor to keep his time thoroughly occupied, other amusement will be found for him.

Messrs. Shakespeare and Shotbolt then took over the reins of justice to hear Mr. Walls' case, which was again adjourned.

This afternoon Mr. Schubert, to avoid further trouble or delay, paid both the license and the cost of the action.

Guessing Match.

To induce cash trade, Lange & Co., will have another guessing match this year. The gifts given are very elegant and valuable. There will be nine presents.

Young Ladies Organize.

Rev. Father Van Nevel has received from the grand council at San Francisco the form of application to be filled in before a branch of the Young Ladies' Institute can be formed in this city. This condition will be at once complied with, and the young ladies will be enabled to proceed with their organization.

Called Aloft.

William Whitmarsh, formerly a shipcarpenter in H. M.'s navy, but for the past 20 years a resident of Victoria, passed away this morning. The deceased was a native of London, Eng., and in the 42nd year of his age. He was well-liked by his many friends, his many good qualities having endorsed him to all with whom he became acquainted. The funeral will be held to-morrow.

Diamond Palace.

Mr. A. A. Clayton, who recently purchased Mr. W. H. Pennock's interest in the jewelry business of Pennock & Clayton, has re-christened the store, and it is now known as the "Diamond Palace." A large and varied stock of holiday goods is displayed, and none but skillful and competent workmen are employed in the manufacturing and repair department. Chronometers cleaned and rated a speciality. Mr. Clayton guarantees satisfaction to all customers.

Robbed in His Sleep.

During the small hours of this morning a young man, a stranger in the city, who had attended the Oddfellows' dance, went to a saloon, sat down in a chair, and went to sleep. His slumbers were not disturbed, but on awaking he found that his pockets had been picked. His watch and chain, $30 and handsome Oddfellow's grand chief patriarch's badge was missing. Sergeant Walker was immediately notified, and he went to work on the case with the result that Ted Jefferson, formerly a cook on one of the sealing schooners, was arrested with the badge and watch in his possession.

A Pleasant Evening.

There were fully 100 couple at the ball given in Oddfellows' Hall last evening by the society's orchestra. A thoroughly good time was had. Sergeant Walker and Dr. Blanchard, masters of ceremonies, performed their parts to the advantage of everybody, strangers being made welcome. George Crossman looked after the wants of the inner man with light refreshments, which are so welcome to the dancers during the intervals. A couple of small hours had passed before "God save the Queen" was played, informing those present that their pleasure must end to give place to sleep.

Don't Try it Here.

There arrived over from the Sound last evening a detective, who proved to be a man with very little experience of Canadian law. He came over in quest of a young man, formerly engaged on one of the Sound steamers who is suspected of being in the opium ring. Telegrams were sent to the young fellow to induce him to cross the Sound, but it was of no use, he would sooner stay here and so the officer was sent. The latter tried to induce him to go and not succeeding it is said he attempted to dope the young man and then carry him aboard, but that little scheme wouldn't work either and the detective returned home this morning. The Canadian law does not even give detectives the privilege to dope men under its flag and if the would-be doper had been caught the climate would have been made warm for him.

From Granite Creek.

W. T. Thompson is down on a business visit from Granite Creek, and is staying at the Oriental. He reports the mining operations for the season fairly good with profits to correspond. This makes the people feel contented and inclined to enter on the next season with the intention of working much harder. A great deal of experimental work has been done this year, which will be turned to practical account next season. The people are very sanguine of the completion of the Spokane and Northern road into their district. Mr. Thompson brought down some specimens of quartz thoroughly well sprinkled with free gold. It is evidently flute rock and was found in the Toulamine River but where it came from is yet unknown. Mr. Laidlaw purchased two of the pieces for $225. Mr. Thompson has given the contract for the building of a hotel and store at Granite Creek. This will be a great boon to the mining community.

Local Boat Race.

A boat race over a mile and a half course was pulled at noon to-day between crews from the upholsters department and the mattress makers of Hastie & Erskine's establishment, for $50 stakes. The winning boat was pulled by mattress makers, W. Bland and W. Wall. The upholsterers were represented by D. Sheddon and Geo. Tite. The men of Hastie & Erskine's are game to try a four-oared crew from any of the upholsters or mattress makers in the city.

Mrs. Abbott to Return.

The wonderful little lady, Mrs. Abbott, who so completely resists the combined strength of several muscular men, and lifts with ease weights which would be heavy for a steam hoist, will give another of her strange exhibitions on Tuesday evening next at the Victoria theatre. The last one was well attended, and many who were desirous of seeing for themselves the curious phenomena, who were at that time unable to visit the theatre will now have an opportunity to do so. Mrs. Abbott's entertainments are simply marvelous, and set at defiance all known natural laws. Everybody is astounded, mystified and amused.

An Historic Organ.

Rev. Mr. Taylor, on behalf of the congregation of St. Barnabas church (which, by the way, is almost completed) has purchased the present organ of St. John's for his new church, the price being $800. The congregation of the new church will not only have a good organ in this purchase, but one of some historic value in this province. For more than twenty-five years it has done duty, helping by its music the worshippers in St. John's Sunday after Sunday unfailingly. It played at weddings and funerals, seasons of joy and sadness in the ecclesiastical year, and has ever been a faithful servant. It was donated by that noted philanthropist, Baroness Burdette-Coutts, whose deeds of charity and generosity are known and spoken of the world over. St. John's people will not be glad to part with their organ, but a growing congregation and the promptings of progress demand that a somewhat larger instrument is required for the church.
